FOR THIS NEW YEAR

Here are four things I long to do in 2013. I want them to be more characteristic of my life when the year ends than they are here at the beginning. In fact, these would be worthwhile aspirations for all of us.

Pray like a child. When any one of us obeys the gospel of Christ, that person becomes a child of God and it becomes his privilege to call on God as Father. By both example and instruction, the New Testament repeatedly urges all who of us who are in Christ to exercise the spiritual discipline of calling on our Father in prayer. This practice is an aspect of our way of life, and it's certainly for our own well-being, but it is also to be thought of as an essential element of our partnership in the progress of the gospel. The first thing I want to do this year is to pray like a child of God who cares about the honor of his family.

Act like a brother. Christ taught us to pray, "Our Father..." Acting like a brother or sister is the demonstration of the sincerity of prayer. After all, when any of us have been born again by obedience to the truth, we have purified our soul "for a sincere brotherly love" and it becomes our purpose to "love one another earnestly from a pure heart." That isn't easy, and it doesn't happen naturally. It involves having the mind of Christ as the spirit in which we act, and maintaining a sense of perspective that accepts and helps, and being considerate of the impact our own choices and actions have on brothers and sisters. This year I want to discipline myself to act more like a brother to more of my family in the Lord.

Live like a neighbor. Relationship with God and fellowship with his people are for the real world. They are measured by a way of life that can encounter and endure the demands of everyday experience. That is the necessary means by which God uses his people as the salt of the earth, and the light of the world, and the leaven of life. The Lord describes the discipline this demands in the Golden Rule. He didn't say, "Don't do what you would not want done," or "Don't do any harm." Living like a neighbor means more than that. It requires this: "Whatever, knowing what you do as a child of God, if you were that person, you would want done to you, do." That's my third aspiration this year—to actually act as a neighbor.

Function like a member. The Lord has given his people, as a whole, work to do together. Each of us has a place in this great work because it grows, not from programs, but from the abilities he has given us. In Christ, we're like a body that has many members and which functions when each part is working properly. No member can do everything, and no member is allowed to do nothing, and this is for belonging as much as it is for effectiveness. There may be many things I cannot do. I can, however, function like a member. I can do what I can do for the good of the whole body. I can act on the opportunities I see. With the Lord's help, that's what I want to do this year.

"Blessed is that servant whom his master will find so doing when he comes" (Lk. 12:43).

AN OLD STORY FOR THE NEW YEAR

By Dennis R. Smith

By now I am sure that most of us have heard many times that as the old year fades out and the new one comes on it is a time of reflection and resolutions. I've always thought it necessary for us to not forget where we've been as we hasten to go wherever it is that we are going. Surely the greatest of stories which must be filed deeply in our hearts and minds would be the STORY OF JESUS. However, there are some stories about those who have been successful in telling the story of Jesus which would be beneficial to repeat. Years ago, as a very young man trying to preach, I often had the privilege of conversing with Brother S. P. Fields, preacher extraordinary. One day I asked him if he could suggest some books that would help me in my preaching. His reply was: "Bro Smith you only need three. They are a good Center-Reference Bible, a Concordance, and the Webster's Dictionary." Since we must not argue against a demonstration, I think I need tell you the success of this stately country preacher. He told me that he estimated that he had baptized somewhere between 6 and 7 thousand people in his lifetime. In addition, he helped establish dozens of congregations in Southwest Missouri and has left a wonderful memory in the minds of hundreds who are old enough to still remember. Since each new generation is expected to build on the old, we would do well not to forget their "tools of the trade" in our endeavors to be equally as successful.
