Soldiers, Centurions, and Veterans

The New Testament has a remarkable way of keeping our feet on the ground when it comes to what exactly is to be affirmed, honored, and celebrated among godly people. This is something we might do well to ponder this week.

Service of every kind is afforded the highest esteem by both the example and the teaching of Christ, and the more the giving of self is involved the greater the service is. Those who follow him are expected to not only be servants but also to honor service.

Yet, there is the clear-eyed recognition that, in any walk of life, having a particular role and being a certain kind of person may be two very different things. Consider, for example, the Roman military personnel we meet in the Gospels and Acts.

The soldiers who appear in the record have clearly not been endowed with nobility by virtue of their roles. They are regular people who struggle with low motives and weak character. Some extorted money by threats or false accusations. Some mocked the suffering Christ and took his garments for themselves. Some accepted a bribe and lied about why the tomb was empty. Conduct like that is not honorable no matter who does it.

But think of the centurions, the soldiers who lead a hundred others. When they come upon the stage, they are generally persons worthy of much respect. There is the centurion who sends asking Jesus to say the word and heal his servant; the one who stands facing the cross and makes the good confession; Cornelius, who has Peter come and tell his family how even Gentiles can be saved; and Julius, the centurion who helps Paul so much on the terrible voyage to Rome. They have some things in common: a sense of fear, humility, justice, kindness, and responsibility—and all of this in the midst of pressure.

That is the kind of thing that is to be honored among godly people. The impressive thing is not so much what the person has belonged to, or where he has been, or even what he has been through. It is who he has shown himself to be through it all.

TAKING ANOTHER LOOK AT HEAVEN

(Matches up with today's Lesson in the Auditorium a reprint - by Dennis R. Smith)

For years men and women across the land have enjoyed singing the beautiful old song, "When We All Get To Heaven." The lyrics of this song hold beautiful and precious thoughts and the melody is quite lively making it an easy song to sing and one with hope and promise. However, not all who sing this song will make it to heaven. This is a promise made by Jesus. He said, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 7:21). Two other old songs also give us something to think about. "My Faith Looks Up To Thee" and "We'll Work Till Jesus Comes." I wonder as we sing these songs if our absolute faith and trust is put in Jesus, the Lamb of Calvary? Also, in the words of the second song, we are making a promise to the Lord that we'll work till Jesus comes. If you have read this article carefully, you will notice that this song, like many of us, may not only lack in faith but that it is not coupled with any creditable works on our part. On the other hand, do we work feverishly in hopes that we can accumulate enough good works to override our lack of faith? Please remember the words of James 2:18: "Yea, a man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works: show me thy faith without thy works, and I will show thee my faith by my works." Focusing on heaven - another old song is also appropriate: "n Give of Your Best To The Master!"
